

RETAILERS RECOMMEND

10 Fabulous Products

by Anya Harris

Daniel Despain of The Learning Bug in Flagstaff, Arizona

"In general, Mini Bulletin Board sets (1) are doing well. Quite a few different vendors offer them now. The ones from Creative Teaching Press have been really successful for us. With all the budget cuts, our customers are looking for ways to save money. The mini bulletin board sets cost a little less, and I think the teachers are really digging that.

"We're really excited about Brain Blasters Math Practice Cards (2) from Edupress. Many have illustrations on them, which is rather unique. Other Edupress flash cards, notably the reading comprehension cards, have been going like gangbusters.

"Anything from Carson-Dellosa's Key Education line does really well in our store, particularly the Photographic Learning Cards (3). Those have been popular with ELL (English Language Learner) and SEI (Structured English Immersion) programs. They have pictures, and teachers can have students use them to practice vocabulary, conversation, writing, and reading to meet various standards.

"The Nonfiction Reading Comprehension workbooks (4) from Teacher Created Resources have been very well received. Titles are keyed to grade levels, and cover topics such as social studies and science, and informational reading. They are popular because they not only hit the standards, but the students can work on reading comprehension while they're studying science or social studies topics."

Nancy Broach from Learning Essentials in Wasilla, Alaska

"We've done really well with the CAMP game (5) from Education Outdoors. I believe part of its popularity here in Alaska

